

Who is my administrator?

Quick definition: A person who manages Google services or devices for a company, school, or group.

Someone in your company, school, or group

If you use Google services with a company, school, or other group, you probably have an administrator who set up your account or Chrome device. This person also manages which services you can use. Because the administrator is part of your organization, not part of Google, we can't tell you exactly who that person is. But here are ideas of who to ask.

Your administrator might be:

- The person who gave you your username, as in name@your-company.com
- Someone in your IT department or Help desk (at a company or school)
- The person who manages your email service or web site (in a small business or club)

I'm an administrator

If you are an administrator of a work, school, or group account, such as Google Workspace, and you forgot the password to your admin account, see Reset your administrator password .

@gmail.com account has no administrator

If the account you want help with ends in @gmail.com, no administrator manages your account. Your account isn't associated with a company, school, or organization. Instead, it's a Google Account that you can manage yourself.

For help signing in to your gmail.com account, see Can't sign in to Google Account .
